DETAILS

Dubbed the State Street by our restoration team, this table's origins are unknown. It was probably constructed in the 1880s-1890s, as it does resemble tables built around that time.

Constructed from fir with rosewood on the top rail, the State Street has a timeless design without being too pretentious. Handsome details on the cabinet complement the square legs; this table would have been well suited for the pool halls of old or in a private residence.
